DIT Access Foundation Programme Programme Details and Expectations

What will I study?

You'll study some core modules such as communications, IT and maths, along with optional subjects to let you try different subject areas like business, art, humanities, social science, science and engineering. Students also take courses introducing them to higher education, research and study skills.

What is the time commitment?

The programme is very demanding, with students having an average of 24 hrs of classes on campus in DIT and a lot of reading, independent study and assignments outside that time.

Lectures are all between 9am and 6pm - it's like having a full time job! You should ask yourself how you will be able to manage your time so that you will be able to complete the assignments required and keep up with classes while also maintaining your commitments to work, family and other pursuits.

What will I be asked to do?

There is a lot expected of students. You need to be prepared to get involved, to engage in group work, in discussions and presentations. You'll be working with other students from a diverse range of backgrounds, as well as working on your own time studying and researching. You'll need to be able to manage your time when juggling different deadlines. To pass the programme, you need to pass all of the individual modules.

What happens afterward?

Based on your performance on the course and the careers guidance and support you will receive during the year, successful students will be offered a place on an appropriate undergraduate course in DIT.

Many students come begin with a place on a certain programme in mind, but it is very common for students to change their mind during the year and find a new path to follow.
